Looking up a phone number is easy. Basically when you do this you are searching a database using the name and address that you already know. Ninety nine percent of the time the results you get are accurate.

The process of "doing a reverse" - looking up the name of a person with a particular phone number or address, is the same - but the databases that allow you to search them in that manner are not as accessible as an ordinary phone book. Just as with an ordinary phone book, ninety nine percent of the time the results you get are accurate.

When doing a reverse on an address, the databases that are used often provide additional, or confusing, results. For example, if you do a reverse on an address, the results sometimes indicate the owner of the property at the address, and sometimes indicate the occupant of the property, which are sometimes different. Depending on what you are seeking, and what is found, additional investigations are sometimes necessary to validate or confirm the findings.

Although the initial findings are not necessarily precisely what is desired, they also often provide useful information that allow us to make connections that are invaluable to our clients. This is especially true with complex investigations. Finding and making those connections is what makes the services provided by web sleuth different from simple computer programs that search databases.

Frequently Asked Questions—and Answers

Samples of some of the simple questions we have answered for clients free of charge:

Q. My disability prevents me from leaving the house, so my spouse does the grocery shopping. This bothers me because I would like to choose the groceries myself, and he can not seem to find the things I ask him to purchase. Is there a solution to this?

A. There are two options for you. One is to do your grocery shopping online at <http://www.netgrocer.com/>. They deliver groceries to your door. Your other option is to purchase a software program, Now You're Cooking. You can customize the program to accommodate your favorite local grocery store. You will need to have your spouse or a friend go to the store once to take note of the aisle numbers for the various products. Input that information into the program. Then using the program you can make a list, by aisle. Give the list to your spouse or caregiver and they can get all the items on the list in the most efficient manner possible. The program has many additional features such as menu planning and recipes. Good luck!

Q. What is a defrag?

A. Let's start with the PC. It seems to be PC to sell PCs without informing the buyers that all PCs require PM. Preventive Maintenance is required on all PCs, unless you plan on replacing the PC as soon as the disk is too fragmented to work instead of when the operating system is updated. Don't worry if that sentence makes no sense right now - it will later. Frequently we get calls from computer users complaining that their computer is working too slowly. After ruling out various other problems we discover that they have never run scandisk (chkdisk) or defrag on their computer. Email us for the instructions on how to perform basic maintenance on your computer.

Q. I am a caregiver for someone who uses a cane and sometimes drops the cane when he gets up in the middle of the night. Is there any way I could be alerted when this happens so I can assist him?

A. It sounds like what you need is the Sure Alert

Alarm, the perfect automatically (or manually) activated assistive technology device for your situation. They are available at www.surealertalarm.com.

Q. We have very little money but would like to rent a movie or go out to eat occasionally. Do we have to forego these luxuries?

A. No! Some of us remember the 60s when everything was free. Sign up at <http://www.freeride.com/> and to get coupons for free movie rentals and free meals at places such as Red Lobster. We use that site on a regular basis and never pay for movie rentals anymore. Enjoy!

Q. I live in Florida and have heard on the news that some of the "doctors" in the area are not real doctors and not licensed to practice medicine. How can I find out if a doctor is really licensed?

A. You can do a search by name at <http://ww2.doh.state.fl.us/irm00praes/praslist.asp> to verify that many types of health care providers, including doctors are licensed.

Q. My washer and dryer both broke down today. I can't afford to hire a repair person. Is there somewhere online that I might find out how to fix them myself?

A. Ask the Samuri at <http://www.fixitnow.com/>

Q. We are getting a new toll free number for our company, and want to use one that spells out a catchy phrase our clients will remember. The possibilities seem endless. There must be a faster way to find the best phrase to use.

A. There is, at <http://www.phonespell.com/>.

Q. Our property was just reclassified as a flood zone and we now have to pay $5,050. a year in flood insurance. But our land has never flooded before. Do we still have to pay for flood insurance?

A. No - for the rest of this answer, see our June Newsletter!
